

OTIM 412 and OTIM 415 First Semester Unit I

Communication means to share information, ideas, values, attitude and feelings by human beings through various medium media for there to be shared, demands cooperation and understanding among the communicators, all human beings communicate consciously or unconsciously. Communication be defined as the process by which information is passed between individuals and/or organisation by previously agreed symbols.

Communication is the transferring of a thought or a message to another party so that it can be understood and acted upon. Communication is the process of exchanging ideas and feelings.

Oral Communication

Oral Communication is the type of communication that is not written. It is spoken and may be persuasive. It is talking about one issue or another. The communicator is usually present in a face-to-face communication. The communicators - the sender and the receiver are physically present. Oral communication takes the form of conversation, consultations, discussions, oral briefing, meetings, public address, telephone calls etc. Oral communication gives immediate feedback such as smiling, frowning, laughing, nodding

Oral communication lacks written record.

Written Communication

Written communication is written and may not require the physical presence of the sender. Written communication requires writing down one's ideas, views etc in a clear and logical manner. Written communication can be in the form of letters, reports, memos, minutes, articles, press release etc.

It is usually a permanent written record. It helps in relating complicated issues and creates room for analysis. It can be used to disseminate information to dispersed audience.

It helps in clarification of information.

The feedback may not be instantaneous.

Intra-Personal Communication

Intra-personal communication is the communication between two persons in a given situation by being persuasive, sharing of ideas, views etc. It can be verbal or non-verbal. It involves a two way flow of messages between the sender and the receiver. It creates room for the two participants to express and clarify issues.

Graphic

It is the act of using drawings, signs, items to communicate, inform, educate and influence human beings.

Verbal Communication

Verbal Communication involves the use of sound symbols or words which are spoken in the form of face-to-face interaction in meetings, public address, conference, memoranda etc.

Non-Verbal Communication

Non-verbal Communication is when communication goes beyond mere use of words to exchange ideas, feelings, attitudes and to disseminate information. It is the action initiated by the communicator to express and impress feelings, ideas, dislikes, love, etc.

Variables of Communication

For communication to take place certain people have to be involved - to do certain things and use certain things. These are what are referred to as the variables. These are:

The Sender

The sender is also called the initiator, encoder, source of the message. He begins the entire process intentionally or unintentionally using verbal or non-verbal symbols or both.

The receiver

The receiver is the second party of in a communication act. He is the decoder of the message by acting on the incoming message by listening, reading or (2) looking to receive the message ~~and~~ understand it and interpret and further gives a feedback which can be negative or positive

The Message

The message is the information that is intended for the consumption of a receiver ~~and~~ by a sender. The aim of the message is to inform, educate, instruct

The Medium

The medium is the way the message is coded. It is the means through which the message is passed to the receiver. It can be through the use of language, letter signs etc.

The Channel

The channel is the route by which the message is received in face to face communication the medium of communication is the language which the ear, ~~is the~~ ^{the} channel the ear, and other part of the body involved is the channel.

The Feedback

The feedback is the response which can be negative or positive.

Purposes of Communication

The purposes of communication is the importance communication has on the society bearing in mind the human being

- ① Dissemination of information
Human beings use communication for the purpose of giving information to others either from management to members of staff or vice versa.
- ② Expression of feelings
Human beings express their feelings and desires and emotions
- ③ Imparting of knowledge
Human beings communicate to educate others and for the acquisition of skills.
- ④ Establishing relationships
Communication helps human beings to establish relationships with others either between a man and a woman or a boy and a girl.
- ⑤ Creating Pleasure
Human beings through signs, symbols, dances, music create pleasure for others
- ⑥ Conveying orders
Human beings use communication to give directives or order to others.

③ Barriers to Effective Communication

Effective communication is the communication that yields a desirable response from the receiver but there are some barriers to the effectiveness such as

- ① The individual differences
Human beings are uniquely different from each other, interpret words differently, perceive realities differently, have varied opinions, culture, intelligence etc
- ② Level of complexity
The level of difficult of communication constitute barrier to effective communication if such information are not broken down into comprehensible information.
- ③ Distortion of information
Distortion takes place if there are several levels of communication hierarchy if there is no open door communication policy.
- ④ Physiological impediments
This can be deafness, blindness and other physical challenges (cripple).
- ⑤ Physical or environmental
The environmental factors such as darkness, noise, distance, lack of public address system, affect communication negatively.

Uses of Paragraphing in written communication

The uses of paragraphing in written communication is for the communicator to convey the message clearly and make it easier for the receiver to understand the message.

A paragraph can be made up of many sentences that are closely related to the idea that is contained in the paragraph. However, there are cases of one main idea. Spelling over to two or three paragraphs. In this kind of case, the connectives are used. The linkers such as again, therefore, in view of the above, etc are used.

Paragraph is used as unifying train of thought which aid comprehension.

Paragraph helps to develop coherence which facilitates the development of points raised naturally and logically linked.

44B (4)
Paragraph is the link topic which is a summary ~~before~~ that leads to easy comprehension.

Difference between letters and Memos

A Memorandum is a written communication from one person to another or a group of people within the same organisation. It is used to give information for actions already taken or about to be taken. It makes request for action or information.

It provides information. The subject matter may be confidential and should be enclosed with an envelope. The memo may be signed initiated or left unsigned.

It is a prepared paper bearing the name of the organisation on top of the letter head. NO salutation but subject matter heading which has to be in capital letters.

LETTER

Business letters are request, Enquiry, complaints, information, ordering, sales etc are the means of establishing business relations with the outside world.

business transactions of all kinds have continued to be carried out efficiently through business letters.

The business letter is composed of the following:

- letter heading
- the address (where there is no letter heading)
- Salutation (Complimentary) opening - Dear Sir, Sir
- The body (contains the introduction, main body and the conclusion)
- Complimentary close (Yours faithfully, Sincerely, Signature, full name title/position)

Intergrup Communication

Internal Communication is the flow of information from the Management to the subordinates, from department to department and from subordinates to Management in an organization.

External Communication is the communication that goes on between an organization and the outside world for establishing business link with people outside the organization. This communication can be done through business letters, telephone, press releases, advertisements, invitations

③ Informal and Formal Means of Communication

Informal communication can be in form of letters, face to face talk, social gathering etc.

Informal communications relates to having interaction with close friends, family members, husband and wife, sharing of jokes, pleasantries, sharing of personal feelings.

Formal means of interaction involves interaction among organisations, governments, corporate bodies, officers, they include letters to the editors, letters of complaint, application letters for employment etc.

Good Public Speech

Speaking in public is reserved for experts or professionals alone. However, as a non-expert, you may be required to give a talk, explain a procedure, be prepared to communicate with your audience instead of feeling intimidated. Identify the main ideas to be put across so that your talk being should not be vague and ineffective and to overcome embarrassment.

① Determine your boundaries - the subject matter - main points

- the audience
- time
- use of ~~issted~~ audio - visual aid
- Preparing the speech
 - acknowledge the MC
 - introduce the topic
 - introduce each point
 - Explain and expand details
 - Recap with summary
 - End on a positive note.
Give hope

③ Delivery

- be confident
- make it interesting
- vary your style
- voice modulation
- Talk to the paper not read

Qualities of good Public Speech

- Topic and audience oriented
- it must be informative
- it must be convincing
- it must stimulate reactions from audience
- arouse the interest of the audience

Paragraph (7 to 10 sentences) ^{44A}

1 Paragraph is a group of sentences about one topic.

It contains a topic sentence, supporting details and a concluding sentence.

A Thesis statement is summary of all the ideas in an essay. It may contain several paragraphs emerging from it.

A ~~topic~~ Thesis statement is the ~~sum~~ can contain several topic sentences which can be at the beginning, middle or end of a paragraph.

The first sentence may move from the general to specific. Eg lbs like money.
boudes like pome
Hrausas eat ~~kala~~

In ancient manuscripts are a line break is used to divide sentences,

Recently indentation is used in a new line

Paragraph Development

① Analysis and Classification
Analysis is an investigation of the components parts of the whole and their relations in making up the whole.

Synthesis

Synthesis is the combination of ideas into a complex whole and deduction: reasoning from the general to the particular

- ① (reason) (results)
- ② Cause and effect
- ③ Definition
- ④ Comparison / Contrast
- ⑤ Exemplification
- ⑥ Outline of process
- ⑦ Narration / description
(use of vivid adjectives)

(10)

(2) Developing good paragraphs

- ① Create an outline
- ② Topic sentence development
- ③ Supporting details
- ④ Use of quotations and evidence
- ⑤ Analyse quotations and evidence
- ⑥ Provide strong relevant information
- ⑦ Use concise language
- ⑧ Use colourful and clear words / adjectives
- ⑨ Create a strong conclusion
- ⑩ Use transit verbs / words links
- ⑪ Obey grammar rules

Thematic Qualities of a Paragraph

① Unity

Unity is when a paragraph develops logically one idea. Eg Religion (religion only) do not ramble from topic to topic

② Coherence

Coherence is when the ideas, thoughts, speech, reasoning is logically connected - consistent and easy to understand.

③ Emphasis: emphasis is placed on the topic sentence in the beginning and the end of the paragraph